A Woman Who Looked Into Dr. Le Moyne's Cremation 1971
He Moyne's Cremation 1971
He Moyne's Cremation 1971
Has Emma Abbott, the famous singer, has lately returned East from her singing tour in the West. She happened to be in Washington, Pa., when the body of Mrs. Pitman was cremated, and witnessed the process. It was said at the time that she went there to see the cremation, but was not permitted to do so. She is indignate about the story.

"I know I was filteen minutes too late, although it was only by an accident that I was present at all, and the flesh was all burned off when I got there," she said to a reporter for the Sun; "but I saw the bones just as, 'clothed in white samite, mystic, wonderful, they were enveloped in flames that more than rivalled the rainbow in their brilliant coloring, as one writer expressed it. I watched them till they had dwindled away into hardly a handful of dust, but "still continuing a beautiful whiteness. I have always had a borror of the grave," the fair singer went on with a shudder. "The idea of being shut up in the dark earth, and there stay till ones body became food for worms and decay, even when I was a girl gave me a dread of death not often found in the young. It is the becoming losth-some—something that those one loved world abudder at could they see into the world abudder at could they see into the sould shudder a could they see into the sould shudder at could on the young. It is the becoming loath-some something that those one loved would shudder at, could they see into the some -something that those one loved would shudder at, could they see into the sepulchre as the worms they crawled in, the worms they crawled out. They are so repulsive, too, the surroundings of a burial. Now, a cremation, you know, is clean and nice. Your loofy burns away for a little while, and then, in place of a great loathsome thing that would spread disease and pestilence about, and make one mad with terror were it exposed to view, you have little parcel of clean, white bones, that you cau stow away in an uru, and keep in your parlor or bedroom if you have a mind."

"When did this love for cremation first spring up in your heart!" asked the writer, as Miss Abbot paused in an excess of enthusiasm.

"Having always had this—unreasonable, if you will—horror of the grave, I long, ago tried to invent a substitute. When I was in Paris, two years since, cremation was the topic of discussion, but I thought it was a long and tedious process. My experience in Washington has taught me just the contrary. A shorthour or-two, and this receptacle of decay is changed into an inoffensive object, if not into 'a thing of beauty and a joy forever.' And so cheap. Why, Dr. Lemoyne told me $15 would cover all the cost, and the payment of pensions to persons the public buildings fortifications, etc., now that labor and material are cheap and workingmen need employncements, public buildings, fortifications, etc., now that labor and material are cheap and workingmen need employncements, public buildings, fortifications, etc., now that labor and materi hour or two, and this receptacle of decay is changed into an inoffensive object, if not into 'a thing of beauty and a jvy forever.' And so cheap. Why, Dr. Lemoyne told me $15 would cover all the cost, and I gave him an order to burn me as soon as I was dead. That he can't do, however, for my friends won't hear of such a thing, and soold me well for my fancies on the subject. I'm in the right, nevertheless. What's $15, compared to the price of a burial in a coatly coffin in a fablonable cemetery? And, then, how unsightly that costly coffin becomes when you have lain in it awhile. Both cleanliness and economy, you see, are in favor of cremation, and it I have my way I shall give my body to be burned after death."

"You evideutly have no religious scruples on the subject."

"Why should I? The idea, I know, is considered paganish, but it surely can make little difference what becomes of one's body after death. Whether its receptacle is burned or buried, the sout surely can live on equally well in that purer region, where no (corruptible body will be required. Old fashioned people, with one foot in the grave—should I say one foot in the retort, or would not that be a retort courteous?—hold up their hands in holy horror when I talk in this way, and point to the clause in the creed about the resurrection of the body; but if burning is to prevent one's resurrection. I would like to know what has become of the souls of Cranmer, Servetus, Savonarols, Joan of Arc, St. Lawrence, and all the contract of the clause in the creed about the resurrection of the body; but if burning is to prevent one's resurrection. I would like to know what has become of the souls of Cranmer, Servetus, Savonarols, Joan of Arc, St. Lawrence, and all the clause in the creed about of Cranmer, Servetus, Savonarols, Joan of Arc, St. Lawrence, and all the contraction is the contraction of the clause in the creed about the resurrection of the body; but if the proper of the souls of Cranmer, Servetus, Savonarols, Joan of Arc, St. Lawrence, and all the c the souls of Cranmer, Servetus, Savona-rola, Joan of Arc, St. Lawrence, and all the other good persons who have perished in the flames for their creed or country?"

The conversation turned to lighter topics, and Miss Abbott said: "I have no patience with those people who pretent to think that, if a singer, a young woman married, is a woman that's marred—to misquote Parolles' sentiment in 'All's Well that Ends Well." I believe that Lord Bacon says 'a man that hath a wife and children hath given hostages to for tune, which will prevent great undertakings, whether lor good or evil. I don't pretend to be exact, but that applies to a man, and not to a woman and asing er. A singer who has never loved or suffered can never be great. If her marriage is a happy one, she has revealed to her chords in the human heart that she would otherwise never know were in existence; and if she is unfortunate in her love, she all the more becomes acquainted with the gamut of passion. It's Lecky, I believe, who says that St. Augustine, through his love affairs when a young man in Carthage, learned that knowledge which inspired his 'City of God' and other writings. So with singers, even if they do not teach so lofty a lesson as the saint."

Miss Abbott laughed as she bade the reporter good-by, and said: "I suppose hereafter I shall be spoken of as the slanger who won't sing in 'Traviato,' believe marriage to be an educator, and wishes to be cremated."

In the light prevent great undertakings, where they mean to settle. There is great competition between 'railroad and steamboat men for the business of transporting emigrants from Canada to Manitoba. It is said that twenty-five or more agents are engaged in looking up the emigrants and making them offers.

Yesterday a strange man came into our new office and spat on the floor. Nine game in the single into him. We fouched a secret spring in the wall; the sky-light siid open; a pair of emmense iron hands came in the slanger who won't sing in 'Traviato,' believe marriage to be an educator, and wishes to be cremated." The conversation turned to lighter topics, and Miss Abbott said: "I have no

Roberts has approved the contract beteen the Joliet Iron & and Steel Mills and the the Joliet Iron & and Steel Mills and the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis Railroad for the manufacture of 18,000 tons of steel rails. In addition to this order, there are other large contracts sufficient to keep the mills running for a year, and the smoke from their towering chimneys will soon announce the dawn of renewed pro-smoke from their towering cnimerys with soon announce the dawn of renewed prosperity for this city. Receiver Leith has satisfactorily arranged matters with the first and second bondholders, and will eventually see that the mill paper held here receives proper consideration. The mills will be operated under the management of Leith, seconded by Judge McRoberts, with H. S. Smith, Eeq., as Superintendent, and about 700 men will be employed on a single turn.

The credit for this belongs to Receiver Leith, Superintendent Smith, the Hon. W. S. Brooks and Judge McRoberts, who have taken a deep interest in the affairs of the mills, and it is to their efforts principally, if not wholly, that Joliet is indebted for the present promising condition of those affairs, and the hopeful future which seems to be in store for the city as a result of the permanent operation of its chief manufacturing establishment. These gentlemen have worked harmoniously for the best interests of the mills, assisting each other when assistance was necessary, and the gradification they feel over the grand success of their management is shared by every person in this community.

ABANDONED AT NEA.

ABANDONED AT NEA.

At all times ships of one kind or another are floating about at sea, abandoned by officers and crew, in what seems a hopeless condition. Some are diamantled and mere bulks, some are awimming keel upwards, some are water-logged, but being laden with timber will not sink, but are driven hither and thither as the wind and waves may direct. So people afflicted with catarrh, bronchitis, and consumption, are abandoned by physicians and friends as incurable, yet thousands of such are annually restored to perfect health by the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The Catarrh Remedy is unequaled as a soothing and healing local application, while the Discovery purifies and enriches the blood and imparts tone and vigor to the whole system.

VIDOLIA, LA., April 17, 1877.

DR. PIRRCE:

Dear bir—I suffered for twelve years with that most offensive and loathsome of all diseases—catarrh. My taste and swell were completely destroyed. I procured a supply of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and your Golden Medical Discovery, which I used according to directions, and a complete and permanent cure was speedily effected. I take pleasure in recommending them to all afflicted.

Ever thankfully yours. DR. PIERCE: to all afflicted.

Ever thankfully yours,

Dear Sir—Your Golden Medical Discovery is the beat medicine for coughs, colds and consumption, I ever knew. It has saved my life.

Respectfully yours, HELEN B. MCANNEY.
